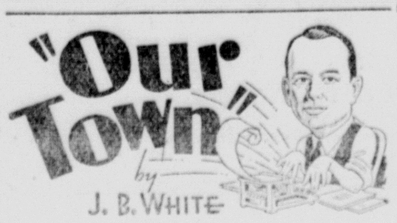
OUTLOOK FOR 1938 IS UNCERTAIN

"Our Town"



by J. B. WHITE

The tumult and the shouting which usher the Old Year derisively out and the New Year hilariously in is, after all, only a spent hour of self abandon.

For when the noise has died and the little night is passed, the fact remains, and the fact is a mile stone set firmly in the fibre of our living journey, and it would come if we slept, or if we kept vigil or indeed, if we passed into eternity in advance of the event.

It is fatality we celebrate; it is human limitation we speed into the night with the Old Year, knowing that all things are beyond our control, and thus we play the bravo, daring Time to do what he can and will, since the dawn is not our numbering.

For some the night of capering; for others the morning of reflection. "Resist the beginnings," says Ovid, but he speaks of temptations. "Those that with haste," remarks Cassius, "will make a mighty fire, begin it with weak straws."

That is wisdom, and the weak straws of our flame are the glenings of New Year's Day, left from the vanished harvest of the dead year.

Spenser was not the first, nor the last, to discover that "each goodly thing is hardest to begin," but there is quite a common discovery that even the weakest of good intentions leaves a reproach among its ruins, and that is something.

Life is a succession of moods, through which we pass again and again; and, according to our character, some grow strong and some more faintly marked as they revolve.

The coming of the New Year is of all these moods the most arresting, because it conspires with the seasons to symbolize life itself. He is a bold man who dares shut his ears to the toiling of the summons this day echoes; he is a foolish man, too, for if the bells monotone their warning they also peal their promise.

Who knows of tomorrow? Of another such day, a year hence, and what shall be writen? Whither the trail; what the rewards? Something stirs within as the day glides into the year; and that profound element of high adventure, which shines through the eyes of a boy whom all the earth awaits a conquoror, flickers, perchance flames, and lights "a candle of understanding in thine heart, which shall not be put out."

Good intentions are not to be despised; they are their own benediction. Not all are wise enough to collect weak straws, but the fault is born of zeal. So long as we ponder the matter and realize, if once a year, that it is even better and more useful to live for good ideals than to die for them, each New Year holds toward us the kindling torch. For these the peal of promise, and the dawn after the night.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Woodruff and son, were in Tyler for Christmas. Mrs. Woodruff will return to Cameron this week after a few days in Tyler with her mother.

NEW YEAR STARTS OFF WITH CAMERON PRIMARY

The New Year will be a span of political activities.

The first election of importance to people in Cameron will be the city primary election to be held in Febuaruy, if called by the Precinct Democratic Executive Committee. Last year no primary was held and two Aldermen were elected at the general election in April. If no contests for nominations develop the Committee might not feel obliged to call a nominating primary.

The primary if held, will be followed by the general city election in April and thereafter an election for school trustees will be held. A complete slate of public offficials in the city are to be elected with the exception of three Aldermen who were elected in April 1937. Trustees were elected at the same time. Four trustees are to be elected this year.

The city elections will be followed by the regular Democratic Primary on the fourth Saturday in July and thereafter in August the run off primary will be held.

The general election for county and state officers will be held in early November.

Jim Bob Crow Central Figure In Murder Mystery 40 Years Ago Dies At Millerton Home

Jim Bob Crow, 73, central figure in a sensational murder trial in Milam county nearly a half century ago, is dead.

The end same Sunday, December 19th at his home in the Millerton community. Pneumonia had developed from an attack of influenza suffered about three weeks ago. He was born September 13, 1864.

Crow was arrested following the death of Miss Mollie White near San Gabriel. She was found dead in bed, her throat slashed and stab wounds in her body. The murder remained a deep mystery, and although Crow was indicted and tried he was never convicted.

The late T. S. Henderson, then a vigorous criminal attorney, took the case. Crow was brought to trial and the case was kept in court through reversals and hung juries for several years, finally resulting in his acquital.

Crow had lived quietly at his farm home all through the years. He steadfastly maintained his innocence. He was said here to have been in love with Miss White.

Funeral services were held in the Salty church Monday afternoon at 3 p. m. Rev. McFadden of the Church of Christ in Taylor, assisted by Rev. Johnnie Moore of San Gabriel, conducted the services. The body was intered in Salty cemetery by that of his wife who had died three months ago.

New High Hit by Fred Astaire in Picture at Cameron Theatre Sunday

Fred Astaire makes merry in a co-starring role with George Burns and Grace Allen in RKO Radio's romantic musical, "A Damsel in Distress," a P. G. Wodehouse story, spiced with captivating tunes by the late George Gershwin. With his engaging comedy Astaire introduces what are said to be the most amazing dance routines of his career.

The show opens Sunday, January 2nd at the Cameron Theatre.

Supporting Astaire and the two radio comics in this riping comedy is a brilliant cast including lovely Joan Fontaine, in the title role, and such distinguished players as Reginald Gardiner, Ray Noble, Constance Collier, Montague Love and Harry Watson.

Astaire portrays a shy American musical comedy favorite who becomes involved in a hetic romance with a sheltered, titled English girl, Lady Alyce, played by Miss Fontaine. The servants at the castle where Lady Alyce lives inaugurate a sweepstake based on who will win Lady Alyce's

Edw. G. Robinson "Last Gangster" Week's Best Screen Program in Cameron

Entertainment of a gripping nature is offered to Cameron audiences in "The Last Gangster which opens at the Cameron Theatre today with Edward G. Robinson back in the type of role which first made him famous as one of the screen's foremost carNoter stars.

In the new story of a notorious gangster whose ruthless criminal career is brought to a close when he is sent to prison for ten years for income tax evasion, Robinson once again portrays his brilliant technique and consummate acting ability.

Also of interest, in connection with the new production, is its introduction to American audiences of the lovely new Viennese "find," Rose Stradner, who plays Robinson's wife in the dramatic narrative and who promises to repeat in this country the triumphs which have hearlded her as one of Europe's most popular actresses.

In "The Last Gangster" Robinson is seen as Joe Krozac, ganster overlord, who marries Talya (Miss Stradner) not because he loves her

Is Big Success Christmas Tree Here December 23

Chamber of Commerce officials were convinced this week that in 1938 greater preparations will have to be made for the annual Christmas Tree and party.

Chairman Emory B. Camp of the tree committee, said that the attendance was beyond all expectations and that 1500 bags were given to children.

Rain and cold caused postponement of the party from Wednesday to Thursday night and little time was left to notify the public of the change.

The program was carried out as announced which included an address by Hon. A. J. Lewis.

The committee on entertainment of which Mr. Camp is chairman, will make a final report on the party.

LOW COTTON PRICE SEEN

Optimism did not dominate the outlook for 1938 as business men and farmers looked forward to the New Year.

If the buoyant spirit of January 1937 was missing from the viewpoint of 1938 there was the hopeful sign that generally the situation was not bad. On the whole many said that while conditions are not as promising as a year ago, it follows that all have ended the old year with a normal volume of business and in some cases business men have shown an increase over the previous year.

Chiefly responsible for the lack of enthusiasm was the prospect of a low priced cotton in 1938. If the Congress enacts legislation to take out of production sufficient acreage to cut the yield to twelve million bales as set by the Department of Agriculture it was believed some measure of relief to cotton farmers would be forthcoming, although there is in prospect little hope for profitable cotton raising in the New Year.

The volume of money on deposit in Cameron banks was above normal and business has continued good after holiday rush was over.

Commodity prices other than cotton was stimulating the farm outlook. A merchant said Wednesday that during five months of the year he buys $50,000 worth of produce from the farmes. "I believe that taken into account as a whole the produce business in Cameron will equal the income from the cotton crop at present prices." These and other pros-

Congressman Poage In Cameron Tuesday

Congressman Bob Poage of Waco was in Cameron Tuesday visiting with old friends. He plans to return this week to Washington to attend the opening of the regular Congress in January.

Mr. Poage was much concerned over the failure of the Congress to pass farm legislation. He introduced a bill to pay farmers 20c per pound on cotton alloted to American consumption, the remainder to be sold on the foreign market. His bill may yet become a law.

CLYDE TYSON DIES IN SHOOTING ACCIDENT

Clyde Tyson, 40, was killed instantly early Tuesday in his home at Hillsboro when a revolver he was cleaning, was accidentally discharged.

For a number of years Mr. Tyson had been a traveling representative of a wholesale grocery firm and at one time lived in Calvert and traveled for the same company, making Cameron territory each week.

He was born at Branchville at the ancestral home of the Tyson's. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Tyson who moved to Cameron when Clyde was a small boy. He received his early education here, graduating from the Cameron high school. The parents now live in Austin, having moved there some years ago.

Surviving are his widow, the former Miss Winnie McCall of Rogers, and a daughter; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Tyson of Austin; three brothers, Carl Tyson of Milano; Roy Tyson of Corpus Christi and Billie Tyson of Austin; three sisters, Mrs. White Hubert and Mrs. James Young of Houston and Mrs. Eunice Lilly who lives in Indiana.

Dan Tyson, city secretary and treasurer, is a cousin; also Mrs. Guy T. Newton and Mrs. Vernon G. Miles of Cameron; Mrs. J. H. Sapp also a relative, resides in Cameron as does Dr. David Smith.

Deceased attended University of Texas after graduating from high school in Cameron. After his school days he took a place with a wholesale grocery company and had been with the company for several years. He moved from Calvert to Hillsboro several years ago.

Funeral services were held in Hillsboro on Wednesday afternoon with interment there.

Coach Wood Goes To Rules Meeting

L. C. Wood at Yoe High school here, is the first high school coach in the history of football, to be named a member of a committee to formulate rules under which the game is played in America.

Rocognition of Wood came yesterday when he received notification from Harry Kipke, president of the American Football Coaches association, that he had been named to the advisory committee to meet in the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans at 10 a. m., Dec. 29. The committee will make recommendations to the national rules committee of the association, and based upon suggested changes the code for football will be formulated.

President of Association

Wood is now serving as president of the Texas High School Football Coaches association, having succeeded Blair Cherry of Amarillo who became assistant to Dana X Bible at University of Texas. In McGregor, where he began his coaching career, to spend the holidays, Wood said that he was making an effort to get opinions from the members of the Texas association before making any plans to submit recommedations for rule changes at the New Orleans meeting.

A little known side of Wood's coaching career is that he first became interested in football while working for the Railway Express company in McGregor. Taking over the job in that McLennan county town, he became one of Texas' best known coaches, winning several titles. He did not arrive at his profession of coaching by the usual college route, nor did he learn from any of the influential college mentors. He is a Baylor man and looks forward next year to a degree from this university.

Came to Cameron

Coming to Cameron four years ago Wood took over the job of head coach. He won the district but lost the bi-district game to Smithville. The following year his team finished second and in the third year he won the district, defeating Mart in the bi-district game and won the regional title on Yoemen field here when his team easily defeated the Odd Fellows Home team from Corsicana.

A recent estimate by a prominent Texas sports editor gave him fourth place as a coach in all Texas.

Louis Littley, chairman of the department of physicial education in Columbia University in New York, writing to Coach Wood to apprise him of his selection, said that no changes have been made in rules except those based on suggestions from coaches. Secondary schools, colleges and universities will be represented in any changes made. Belief here is that some change will be made in forward pass rule, perhaps to curb the wild type that has so characterized southwestern play and restore in slight degree the old fundamentals of football, otherwise it may soon become eleven-men baseball.

hand. The girl is being coerced into a marriage with an English fop by an imperious old aunt.

Through an ingenious set of circumstances, Astaire is made to believe that Lady Alyce is in love with him, and he quits his show in London and rents a cottage near the girl's ancestral castle. The entire castle and countryside enter into the romance, and many hilarious complications result.

Burns and Allen, remaining true to the characters they portray on the radio, do their share to sabotage Fred's romance. Allen plays Astaire's press agent, and Gracie is George's dumb but effervescent secretary.

Ray Noble, noted English orchestra leader, has the role of a foppish English chap, who is Astaire's rival for the hand of Lady Alyce.

Reginald Gardiner, foremost English comedian, plays Keggs, a martinet steward, who reigns with an iron hand over Hotleigh Castle, the real owners of which are Lady Alyce, her father, Lord Marsmoreton, Montague Love; and her Aunt Caroyln, Constance Collier.

Naturally the outstanding feature of the picture is the dancing of Astaire. In a departure from his past pictures, he performs two novelty routines with Burns and Allen, one a Whisk Broom Dance in an English cottage, and the other in a fun palace in an amusement park. He does two solo novelty dances, his Drum Dance, in which he plays a dozen percussion instruments, and his Street Dance in which he eludes a policeman to rhythm.

Astaire is heard singing songs written for the picture by the late George Gershwin and his brother Ira. For the first time in a filmusicial, two modernized English pastoral songs, "Sing of Spring" and "The Jolly Tar" and the "Milkmaid" are featured with Astaire doing a comedy routine with a group of madrigal singers. "Foggy Day in London" and "Things Are Looking Up," are lilting romance ballads, while "I Can't Be Bothered Now," and "Nice Work If You Can Get It" are novelty rhythm numbers.

The majority of the scenes were photographed in and about an English Castle, an English countryside cottage, a London street, and an English amusement park. A huge Tudor castle was constructed for the picture.

Many P. G. Wodehouse stories have been adopted for the films, but this is the first time the noted English humorist has done one of his own stories for the screen play.

George Stevens, one of Hollywood's youngest and most successful directors, who handled a previous Astaire hit, "Swing Time," preferred the same function in "A Damsel in Distress," which a Pandro S. Berman production.

but because he wants to become the father of a son. It is not until he is sent to prison for income tax evasion that Talya learns the true ruthlessness of her husband's character and divorces him to marry Paul North (James Stewart), a reporter who has befriended her and her infant son. When Krozac finally serves his prison term he seeks out his former wife with revenge in his heart. It is his ultimate understanding of his own unfitness to be a father to his child that brings about a stirring climax to the story.

Robinson has never been greater than in his role of Krozac and both Miss Stradner and Stewart contribute memorable support as the wife and other man respectively. A uniformly fine cast also includes Lionel Standder as Robinson's chief henchman, Douglas Scott as the child, John Carradine, Sidney Blackmer, Grant Mitchell, Edward S. Brophy, Alan Baxter, Frank Conroy and Louise Beavers.

Edward Ludwig has done an expert directorial job, particularly effective being the prison riot scenes and the tragic metamorphosis undergone by Robinson when he enters prison and finds himself robbed of all his former glory and power.

"The Last Gangster" is a picture for all classes and tastes. It leaves its imprint long after the spectator has left the theatre.

Weems Home Enjoys Family Reunion

Christmas was happy time for Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Weems.

Their children—eleven in number, came home to spend the night just as they did years ago. They left their families and went home to mother and father for the night, each hanging up a stocking which Santa filled with gifts.

The early evening of Christmas eve was taken up with recollections of by gone days. They played 42, talked and had a lot of fun. Then all were tucked away for the night.

On Christmas day their families came and enjoyed the dinner with the children and their parents. A Christmas tree was placed for the occasion.

The children are: Melvin, Roy, Owen and Robert Weems; Mesdames August Horstmann, Maud Chambers, Grady Little and Miss Serena Weems of Cameron; Mrs. R. M. Haddox of Hearne, Mrs. W. Fulton of Temple and Mrs. Albert Evard of Baytown.

Buck Jones Gives Best Performance In "Black Aces" At Milam Friday

When Kernville, Cal., was called Whisky Flat, the booming gold camp was the center of a desperate feud. That was more than 80 years ago. Then the old town lived up to its name. There were 14 saloons in one block of its dusty, winding, riproaring street. Now only the shells of those houses are left. The place is generally deserted. Recently Buck Jones used it for filming outdoor scenes of Universal's "Black Aces," which opens at the Milam Theatre on Friday..

On the old Walker ranch near Kernville, where ghosts of treasure finders are said to whisper on dark nights, there is still standing the gold stamping mill that once set its imprint on a vast fortune in gleaming yellow metal. Now the mill is falling apart. In that locale Buck filmed a number of the movie sequences.

The evening after the first day's filming, several of Buck's cowboy actors discovered traces of gold dust around the disintegrated machinery and floor of the stamp mill. The word passed like wildfire to the entire cast and the techincal crew.

After each day's filming was over, they dug in the crannies of the mill and in the ground around it searching for gold. Many of them found a small quantity, but not enough to be worth anything commercially. A whole generation of men had dug and struggled, fought and killed over the gold at Whisky Flat. The men were gone. So was the gold.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hebner had as guests for the Christmas holidays Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Senkel, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hartnett and son, Joe David of Galveston and Mr. and Mrs. Bondreaux of Houston.

Looking To 1938

The dawn of a New Year is always a matter of great concern to the people and to the world of business.

How to measure the possibilities is not given to mortal man. We may reasonably anticipate certain necessary arrangements with safety by reading the sign posts that stretch back over the way we have traveled.

This much we know and this much you may rely upon: Citizens National Bank will continue to anticipate the need for better banking service. It will also continue to play its part in the co-operative enterprises that make for progress.

With this firm resolve the Citizens National Bank challenges the spirit of enterprise and the inherent optimism of our people. We will go forward.

Thoroughbreds Don't Cry Packs Thrills of Turfdom

Thrills of the race track form the background for a dramatic story of childhood friendships and loyalties in "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry," which offers an intimate glimpse into both the hearts of youngsters and the machinations between scenes in turfdom. The picture is for the midnight show at 11 o'clock, Friday, December 31st and also has the Saturday run January 1st at the Cameron Theater.

Introducing Ronald Sinclair, Hollywood's latest find in British boy actors teamed with Judy Garland, child singer and actress, the veteran Sophie Tucker, both of whom scored in "Broadway Melody of 1938," and Mickey Rooney, young Sinclair appears in his first important role. He was a stage star in New Zeland, his native land, until discovered by Hollywood

The story deals with the friendship of a little English boy, grandson of a horse racing sportsman, and a young American jockey, the keeper of a racetrack boarding house and her niece. The jockey is decieived into betraying his friend. Remorse, regeneration and childhood loyalty all are woven into the human story. A great race hourse, "The Pookah," is on important figure in the story.

Alfred E. Green directed the new picture which was filmed largely at the famous Santa Anita racetrack. Many famous race horses and jockeys appear in its action.

A notable cast includes C. Aubrey Smith, Forrester Harvey, Frankie Darro, Charles D. Brown, Henry Kolker Helen Troy and many others. Thousands appear in the race track sequence. The story is an original by Eleanore Griffin and J. Walter Ruben.

42,554 Bales of Cotton Ginned to December 13, 1937

Buck Jones Gives Best Performance In "Black Aces" At Milam Friday

When Kernville, Cal., was called Whisky Flat, the booming gold camp was the center of a desperate feud. That was more than 80 years ago. Then the old town lived up to its name. There were 14 saloons in one block of its dusty, winding, riproaring street. Now only the shells of those houses are left. The place is generally deserted. Recently Buck Jones used it for filming outdoor scenes of Universal's "Black Aces," which opens at the Milam Theatre on Friday..

On the old Walker ranch near Kernville, where ghosts of treasure finders are said to whisper on dark nights, there is still standing the gold stamping mill that once set its imprint on a vast fortune in gleaming yellow metal. Now the mill is falling apart. In that locale Buck filmed a number of the movie sequences.

The evening after the first day's filming, several of Buck's cowboy actors discovered traces of gold dust around the disintegrated machinery and floor of the stamp mill. The word passed like wildfire to the entire cast and the techincal crew.

After each day's filming was over, they dug in the crannies of the mill and in the ground around it searching for gold. Many of them found a small quantity, but not enough to be worth anything commercially. A whole generation of men had dug and struggled, fought and killed over the gold at Whisky Flat. The men were gone. So was the gold.

BELMENA SCHOOL

NEW YEARS RESOLUTIONS OF A DELINQUENT STUDENT

Eductation—Gr—Gr—Gr—What a hard word. School—a prison without the bars, to me. Or is it? Or is it not? Is school really hard on me; or is it just an imagination—am I just growing too boresome for the school; but why be thought hard-boiled and tough; the Indians are all gone, and the Civil War, too, so they say. Then too, so I hear, the G-men are on the go, picking up little boys like me and you to keep them from bothering the quality folks and shipping them by the truck loads to the schools with the bars on. So, Buddy, take a tip from me, let's go to school and be quality folks, too.

As I pause quietly and look about into this fast moving world of today, I realize the fact that everybody is moving fast, hustling, shuffling and striving for the bigger and better things; that like the butterfly on the current of the wind as the bubble floating on the rushing streams of water, I, too, am drifting, not knowing where, but just the same I know that I am going somewhere. Where—nobody knows much less, I who doesn't care or give a whoop, though some people seem to care including my pop and mom and my teacher too, but what of it.

Sometimes it seems to me that my teacher is at least half-way right when he says that I don't even love myself, much less society, if I have no ambition to build for my future, or to make the trail smoother for my fellow-men, but what do I care about my work tomorrow, next year, and so on, I want to have my fun today and let the hard times get me later on—what do I care, at sixty-five I get my pension any way.

But something down deep in me seems to whisper to me quietly, "Buddy! every day you are 24 hours closer to the time when you will want to call something your own—a cozy home, painted white, lined with pretty things—a brand new streamline automobile with a quick get away at your service with a tank full of gasoline, and last but not least, in fact, the most important thing—some easy steady job netting me enough "do-rae-me" to keep the paint on my house and the lights burning inside and the radio playing, to keep my stomach satisfied and the wheels of my limousine a spinning.

Yes, one half of me wants me to go to school and the other half says, "partner, let's go fishing, or get into Mr. Jones melon patch," what am I to do? Oh, yeah, I get it now—standing on the brink of a new year and seeing a new sun rising in the far east, I shall, and now resolve to change hands—to make my new year's resolutions: To become the very best student, to avail myself of every opportunity my school has to offer, and to lend my teachers full hearted co-operation and to do everything that has any bearing upon my future training both spiritual and temporal.

—Annonymous.

"Dangerously Yours" Preview Picture Is Thrilling Romance

Matching wits on a transatlantic thrill-ship for a world-famous diamond, a beautiful young girl, fond of gems, and a gaily romantic adventurer, fond of danger, keep just one step ahead of the law but find they can't escape from their hearts in "Dangerously Yours," Twentieth Century-Fox picture featuring Cesar Romero and Phyllis Brooks, opening at the Cameron Theatre Sunday.

The loveliest adventuress that ever coveted a jewel, Phyllis Brooks is commanded to steal Cesar Romero's diamond, but stealing his heart is her own idea! The result is peril-packed adventure that covers two continents and turns a desperate competition for the world's most fabulous gem into the climax of an exciting romance.

Directed by Mal St. Clair, the screen play by Lou Breslow and John Patrick was supervised by Executive Producer Sol M. Wurtzel, with Jane Darwell and Alan Dinehart also featured.

Handsome Cesar Romero is posing as a rich Argentine cattle-man, but Phyllis Brooks and her aunt, Jane Darwell, suspect that he is really after the fabulous Omar diamond being transported to America by a noted gem dealer. Miss Brooks is after the diamond herself, however, so she makes love to her handsome shipmate to keep him away from the stone.

Other crooks aboard the transatlantic liner begin to offer competition, but a neat coup lands them in the net of the law, leaving Romero and Miss Brooks to a battle of wits between themselves for possession of the gem.

The climax is as surprising as it is packed with suspense and fast action, with the daring jewel robbers rounded up and an international ring smashed.

"Dangerously Yours" marks the first romantic leading role for Cesar Romero, who hiterto has played only "heavies." With lovely Phyllis Brooks in her first big role, this pair is considered outstanding potential star material at the Twentieth Century-Fox studis.

pective sources of revenue were believed to offer a balancing of the business scales for the remainder of the winter and spring.

There remain to be received a large number of payments from the government to farms under the soil conservation act and cotton placed in the market pools under government supervision is yet to be sold.

Little or no benefits are expected from government works as county and city officials lacked the initiative to inaugurate projects in the face of receding cash reserves. The new year will not see any public works. The unemployed therefore face the prospect of shifting for themselves as best they may.

Business men generally were confident the Congress would stop the wild expenditure of tax money known in the first few months of the past year. If congress declines to pass the minimum wage and hour bill it would follow that small business men here could proceed within the restricted income from lowered business volume and steer a safe course down through the months that are to follow. If added over head should follow the plight of small business would be multiplied.

Taking stock and getting ready for 1938 was the order of the day in Cameron. In January arrangements are made for the year's work on the farm. When sun shines in January and furrows begin to streak the fields, the year may be said to be officially under way.

There was still the bitter pill of tax paying and whether delinquencies would increase remained to be seen.

Herbert Marshall Tops Screen Bill Here January 4

Introducing a brilliant new light comedy team in the persons of Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall "Breakfast for Two" is an offering replete with witty dialogue, mirth-provoking situations and clever characterizations.

The picture opens at Cameron Theatre on Tuesday, January 4.

Barbara Stanwyck is cast as a fiery debutante from Texas who becomes interested in a Broadway playboy whom she meets in a night club and escorts home in a tipsy stage.

Learning that the charming ne'er-do-well, as played by Marshall, is sadly neglecting a steamship line to which he has fallen heir, and is squandering his income on Glenda Farrell, a dizzy actress, Miss Stanwyck decides to reform him and then marry him, despite his plans to the contrary.

To this end she employs her own vast fortune to gain control of the shipping business, and places Marshall in the position where he has to work for a living. Miss Stanwyck, with Marshall's faithful man-servant, Eric Blore manages to make a man out of the spendthrift in spite of himself.

In addition to Miss Stanwyck, and Marshall, the cast of principals numbers Glenda Farrell, Eric Blore, Frank M. Thomas, Etienne Girardoa, Donald Meek and Pierre Watkin.

Superintendent Miles of the Rockdale schools, was in Cameron Monday on business and to spend a few hours with many friends in the county capitol.

To My Friends and Patrons:

After January 1, 1938, a dentist is prohibited from advertising low prices or to tell the public he can save you money. The last Legislature, under pressure from the majority of non-advertising dentists, passed this law. It has been my policy and ideal in the past to make a conscientious effort to do satisfactory dentistry at the lowest possible cost to my patrons—

SATISFACTORY DENTAL WORK AT PRICES YOU CAN AFFORD TO PAY

I have in the past advertised my low prices in our newspapers, by cards, etc.—after January 1, 1938, that would be a direct violation of the law.

I wish to remind you that the law DOES NOT CONTROL THE PRICE I charge you, after January 1, however, when you come to my office.

I express my appreciation of your patronage and shall strive to continue to merit your approval and good will in the coming year.

Announcement of the grand prize awards is made this week by the gas company through an advertisement appearing in this issue of the paper.
